Nora McEvoy
Philadelphia, PA

Nora McEvoy has more than 20 years of enterprise-wide Strategic Organizational Development Consulting and Sales experience in the Talent Management space with Fortune 500 companies. Her passion is to inspire and equip executive leaders to recognize their God-given abilities, leverage strengths, develop hidden talents, unleash potential, maximize performance, and achieve the highest levels of competitive advantage and business outcomes.

Nora moved from a high-intensity work life to a more balanced quality of life as she heard God's nudging to make a change. Unaware of His plans, she simply recalled His Word in Isaiah 6:8. The 'change' led to increased margin and opened doors to influence Marketplace Leaders for greater Kingdom impact. In addition to being Principal Owner of her Executive Coaching and Talent Management Consulting practice, she is very involved in her church and community, a graduate of the Halftime Institute Fellows Program, a coach with His Way at Work, and a Halftime Certified™ coach. She also serves on the Board of Directors with Good Works, Inc.

Though churched from a very young age, Nora only heard the truth of the Gospel decades later. She instantly believed Jesus as her Lord and Savior, and is now compelled to share the Good News with others—at home, in the community, and in the marketplace—with or without words.

Nora and her husband, Mark, enjoy living in Chester County just outside of Philadelphia, PA. They love the gorgeous scenery, precious time with family, including twin daughters Jaclyn and Nicole, son-in-law Steve, Mom, siblings, large extended family, and friends. They are awed to see how God is working in and through them and others. They also enjoy playing golf, attending church events/conferences and bible studies, volunteering in restoration ministries, working on a variety of projects together, and going on weekend adventures.

James D. Dean
Colorado

Jim has always been a focused, goal oriented person. With God's blessing, he achieved almost every goal he set. But the continued pursuit of success no longer satisfied. While thankful, something was missing.

Before Halftime, Jim served as a private wealth manager to clients seeking the timeless truths of the Bible to guide their financial decision-making. He reached a point where the focus mostly on money and finances, and bigger investment portfolios, was no longer enough. Jim knew God was using him as a voice in people's lives. He had the desire to make an even greater impact. But what should he do? Stay where he was, or move on? And if he moved on, to what?

Soon after he was introduced to Halftime, which God used to help him recognize something different was ahead, something better. He knew he needed a coach to sort out the noise and the ideas to get focused on what was next. Through coaching, Jim learned that God had a purpose for him as a Halftime coach.

Jim is passionate about helping others discover God's unique purpose for their lives—and get engaged in that purpose—in their second half. He says, "It is exciting to hear someone say it's time to make a change, and they need to find out what that looks like. Everyone's journey is different, and to walk with someone as their new second half becomes clear, then comes to life, is most satisfying."

Jim found his second half calling and God's purpose for this season of life. It is Jim's desire to see everyone experience the joy he now has.

As part of their own halftime journey, God gave Jim and his wife Elizabeth the desire to start a new life 2,000 miles away from South Florida, where they lived for 27 years. As God opened this new chapter and led them forward, they moved to the mountains of Colorado. Their two grown children are happily married and they have three grandchildren. Jim is part of leadership in his local church and leads the John Stiger Ferry Foundation. He and his wife enjoy hiking, snowshoeing, and skiing.
